

Types of Details

1. Match the type detail to its definition.

Type of Detail	Definition
_____ fact	1. somebody who has education, training or experience related to the topic _____ statistic	2. a general truth known to most people _____ expert opinion	3. to say what somebody/something is like _____ description	4. a piece of information shown using a number

2. Identify each type of detail.

- a. Every professor at an American university has “office hours” in which students can visit the professor, ask questions about the course, or consult on his or her future. _____
- b. American professors believe their students’ education is more important than their research (Pearson, 2001, p. 73). _____
- c. The annual salary of a full, tenured professor is $100 000 in the United States. _____
- d. At the end of each semester, students evaluate the professor’s lectures, his or her attitude towards the students, the textbooks, the workload and exams. _____